THE NEXT HOUSE.

Republicans Claim Five Majority in the Next House,

Notwithstanding Unfavorable Means [illegible]

The Recount in West Virginia Shows a Democratic Gain.

Gen. Palmer on his Withdrawal From the Grand Army.

[illegible] Candidates

Chicago, November 29.—At the conference of republican leaders of Wisconsin here yesterday one paper declares that it was decided to push the name of Henry C Payne for the position of postmaster general Another paper declares Governor Rusk was chosen to represent Wisconsin in the cabinet.

Quay going to visit Harrison

Chicago, November 29.—A Washington special says Chairman Quay is going to Indianapolis He has gone home to Beaver to spend Thanksgiving, and from there he will go west The chairman doesn't care to have his journey heralded by brass bands, and he wanted his visit kept quiet It is understood he goes in response to a personal invitation from General Harrison, The chairman of the national committee and the president-elect never met. It is known Harrison wants to consult with him about the congressional elections and the results in the southern states as the main subject at the conference of the cabinet. Quay expects to support John Wanamaker; the Philadelphia merchant, for postmaster general. Another special says Quay himself is going into the cabinet.

The West Virginia Recount

Chicago, November 29.—A Wheeling, Va., special says: Should Pendleton, democrat, receive the certificate of election to the Fifty-first congress for the district, as the returns now appear to stand, the democrats should be able to organize the house by a vote of 163 to 162. The count has been completed in Hancock county. The recount resulted in a loss of thirty-nine for Atkinson, and Gibson, democrat, now has nineteen majority in the district.

Palmer and the Grand Army.

Chicago, November 29.—A Springfield special says: The feeling among veteran soldiers and friends of Gen. Palmer in regard to his withdrawal from the [illegible] campaign is intense. Interviews with various members of the organization. Gen. Palmer has read the interviews and [illegible] to the same subject from [illegible] and other states, [illegible] Southern Utes for their approval of what [illegible] Convention comprehensively [illegible] the agency to date and do not [illegible] a barbecue dinner instead of a day of fasting and humiliation. It will be [illegible] Washington, where about an [illegible] are expected to be present. Wisconsin visited [illegible] to be [illegible]. Ex-soldiers can evoke their [illegible] and [illegible] and political duties [illegible] the interview could [illegible] will not be required to [illegible] the fact that the Grand [illegible] organization is [illegible] in its [illegible] and an organized adjunct to [illegible] party. In the same connection Post [illegible] took occasion to [illegible] as false the charges that he [illegible] the orders of General Sherman [illegible] field, or that he left the army in the most honorable manner.

Railroad Pact

[illegible], Kas., November 29.—It is [illegible] that the Union Pacific will take possession of the Central [illegible] now being held by the Missouri [illegible] lease, and by connecting it at [illegible] with the Grand Island road, [illegible] as part of the Union Pacific [illegible] also leasing it to the Rock [illegible] If this is done the Missouri Pacific will build west from Hiawatha.

Men in Politics.

Chicago, November 29 John Gar[illegible], Ilchman and other prominent men are preparing to form a national labor organization It [illegible] with political questions, but it will be non partisan It will [illegible] opposition to the Knights [illegible].

Gen. Palmer Talks

Washington, November 29.—A special [illegible] from Wheeling, Va., says: [illegible] men, wearing [illegible] badges, [illegible] the hall here at 2 [illegible] and, [illegible] long as rescued Wednesday [illegible] a sentence of death for the [illegible] Harrell. He was [illegible] to be hanged tomorrow Peter Harrell [illegible] in March, 1887, and the [illegible] of which was circumstantial [illegible] to Ware [illegible] father-in-law, Morgan. CABINET BUSINESS.

[illegible] Commons to-day [illegible] Healy asked [illegible] the government leader, [illegible] to recommend the house to take [illegible] regarding the charge against Davis of using money received in a fiduciary capacity. Smith denied the existence of any proof to justify him, asking the house to pronounce judgment on Davis. The resolution of a liberal reminded the house that the expulsion of a member could be decreed for breach of trust, and he asked if Davis' conduct did not amount to that.

Smith protested against hasty action in a matter affecting the character and honor of the members. Healy intimated that unless the government acted in the matter he would move Tuesday next that a new writ be issued for an election to fill the seat now held by Davis.

A Missouri Tragedy.

St. Louis, November 29.—Details of a horrible outrage, murder and suicide come from Nevada, Mo., to-day. The outrage and murder was committed about eight miles south of Nevada yesterday. Miss Wray, accompanied by George Corb, who taught the district school and boarded with Mrs Wray, went to the city. Corb returned last night alone and said the girl had been dragged from the buggy and murdered by two unknown men. The body was found in a clump of bushes near the roadside, the young woman's throat having been cut from ear to ear. Corb was placed under guard and during that night committed suicide by taking poison, thus escaping lynching. The coroner's inquest developed that fact that the girl had been outraged and murdered.

Disaster at Sea.

Philadelphia, November 29.—Capt. Talpin, the 1st, of the French steamship Panama reports that during a tremendous storm on the 26th, about 8 o'clock at night, [illegible] were seen shooting up from a hulk which was nearly level with the water. Capt. Chidot bore down on the craft, as near as possible, but was unable to get close enough to rescue the crew. He could distinctly see men clinging to the afterworks, waving lights and begging to be taken off. He believes the vessel to have been a full-rigged ship. She was deeply laden and [illegible] foundered with all on board. When he left them they were waving torches, but after a few moments all the lights died out.

Woman's Work in Chicago

Chicago, November 29.—The common council must be prepared to receive a delegation of women's clubs [illegible] earnest, intellectual women who interest themselves in various enterprises for the public good. They have a fine room, a committee room in the Art Institute building, and a membership of upward of three hundred. The work of the club is distributed among committees [illegible] self-designated reform, home education, art and literature, philanthropy and philosophy and science. The session yesterday was under the direction of the education committee. A resolution [illegible] calling on the authorities for strict enforcement of the compulsory education law is the only means to force enlightenment into the dark places of the city. A strong committee will lay this before the council.

A Bank Collapses

Lake Crystal, Minn., November 29 The state bank of Lake Crystal suspended payment yesterday. Randolph Mitchell is president and H. Ray Howard cashier. It had a large number of small deposits aggregating about $50,000 Nearly every one in the place is bitten The cause of the suspension was speculation in December wheat. The cashier received all deposits offered up to the time of posting the notice of suspension.

A Raid By Tramps.

Rochester, November 29.—It was reported in this city to night that at a little hamlet near Olean on the Buffalo, New York and Philadelphia railway, upwards of seventy tramps made their appearance at an early hour this morning and began to invade the town and sack dwellings. Forty men attacked them. The trainmen had the shotguns Further assistance was asked for from surrounding towns. No more particulars could be learned

Mrs. Sherman's Funeral.

St Louis, November 29.—The private car containing the remains of Mrs. General Sherman will arrive at the Union depot Saturday morning Services will be held at College church, 22nd and Lindell avenues, at 11 a. m., and the interment will be made at Calvary The pallbearers are. H P Tansey Generals Pope, Henderson and Noble, ex Mayor Francis Henry Hitchcock, D Rerguson, F. A. Drew and James P. Eatman

Forcing Oleomargarine.

St Louis, November 29.—It is rumored oleomargarine manufacturers of Chicago have bought up the Elsberg's put of butter, the price of which has advanced ten cents a pound to forty cents with a rise of a week, and it is said will be put up to sixty. The object is to make butter so dear poor people will be forced to buy oleomargarine.

Weather Indications.

Indications for twenty-four hours commencing Friday, Nov. 30, at 7 a. m. For Colorado—Light local snow, stationary temperature

The Afric Blockade

Zanzibar, November 29.—The English and German admirals in the sultan's name have published a proclamation to the effect that the blockade will commence noon Sunday.

Thanksgiving was very generally observed in Colorado Springs yesterday. The postoffice, banks and border shops observed Sunday hours, while a majority of the business houses were closed during a greater part of the day. The people generally seemed to give themselves up to the spirit of the day, and feasting and family dinner parties was the general order Almost every home in the city observed the day in some manner or other; and all the numerous hotels and boarding houses made an extra effort in the culinary department The religious exercises at the different churches were all well attended and a reverential spirit of thankfulness was manifest. The various entertainments provided for the day were well enjoyed

Target Practice

In the morning at nine o'clock the Company A had its annual target practice on the old ground across the Monument. Company A has for a number of years made Thanksgiving day an occasion for considerable of a demonstration and yesterday was one of the most memorable of these occasions. The good result of the target practice is noticeable each year and the boys are gradually becoming proficient. The members of the company are graded into three classes according to their merits as marksmen, as demonstrated in former practice. Class A. is the highest, class B the next, class C the lowest. With each class there is a silver cup which is presented to the best marksman in it each year, and to the best marksman in all three classes there is a handsome gold medal presented which he is entitled to wear until it is wrested from him by some one more expert. If he gains the medal for three successive years it becomes his personal property. Mr. Joel Atkinson has carried the badge for two years past, but Mr. Eli Lowther made the best score yesterday, 42 out of a possible 50, and will carry it the coming year. The [illegible] of the prizes were distributed as follows: Mr. J. C. St John, class A; Mr. R. H. Dow, class B; Mr. G. D. [illegible], class C. The following is the official score:

The Parade.

At three o'clock in the afternoon Company A paraded through the principal streets, dressed in their new uniforms, being very gorgeous when seen together The parade was headed by the Fireman's band, which turned out and escorted the boys as a compliment It was a very graceful act and they appreciated it thoroughly. At the close of the parade the company went to the open space in front of The Antlers and executed a drill in fine style.

The Ball.

In the evening the annual ball of Company A was given at Masonic hall. It was a very successful affair A great many tickets were sold, many merchants purchasing as a compliment to the company. There were about fifty couples in attendance and many gentlemen present without ladies A thoroughly good time was had by all. Metz's orchestra furnished excellent music and Charlie Berrey, as prompter, "umpired the game" in his usual good style. At 11 o'clock the company sat down to a splendid supper at the Delmonico restaurant Mr. and Mrs. J. O'Read know how to serve a supper of this kind to perfection and they did their best last night.

Thanksgiving Services.

There was a very large attendance at the union services at the First Baptist church yesterday morning. Every seat and the aisles were filled and many had to stand up According to the programme there was no sermon but three of the ministers of the city made short addresses Rev Richard Montague the pastor, presided conducting the service according to the usual custom in the Baptist church Rev M S Johnson of the Christian church spoke for some fifteen or twenty minutes, his remarks being very general as to things for which there should be thanksgiving and praise. He was followed by Rev Jas B Gregg, of the Congregational church, whose remarks were more specific. Among the many things to be thankful for was that so good and devout a man as General Harrison had been elected president. The people of Colorado Springs should be thankful for the progress which Colorado [illegible]

God has crowned another year with His mercies, and once more we have come up to His courts with the voice of praise and thanksgiving.

In spite of [illegible] God is to be managed by blind chance. He the good and gracious One, observes and directs all things Himself. The unceasing hand which guides the planets in their courses is extended to every one of us and there is a careful disposal of the minutest particulars for our benefit. Take the animal frame and we perceive the goodness of God. Take the various provisions for our sustenance and the chemist will tell you though he discovers some of the nutritious principles his art fails but before they are all understood. Take the atmosphere, and we learn that its vital strength is so diluted as to prevent any exhaustive effect on the physical construction. Take the department of medicine, and we perceive the goodness of God so extended as to reach not only our natural wants, but also those additional necessities which have resulted from our abuse of the kindness of heaven. Take the course of human affairs and in the midst of endless perplexities we see each one receiving his portion in due season. These and many, many other reasons we have for thankfulness, among which are those which the civil authorities in their proclamations have mentioned such as our national peace and prosperity, our freedom from epidemic diseases and our marvelously abounding harvests are more than sufficient to make us glad to avail ourselves of the privilege of once more in Thanksgiving [illegible] this day.

But the ground upon which such service rests is not the civil or national command. The state governor and president in calling us together, are truly recognizing and proclaiming the religious sentiment of the people, a sentiment which exists and which would show itself in such a form once a year, even though the state authorities did not call us thus to a public festival. This festival will be kept, even if the government did not order its observance. For it is older than our state and nation older than the first settlement in New England The church's Thanksgiving day is no mere imitation [illegible] our favorite New England holiday, since she first observed her beautiful feast of the harvest home long years before the keel of the Mayflower was laid. Such service has held front in [illegible] the heathen command Thanksgiving service, for it is a dictate of the natural religion. The Hebrews of [illegible] two such days as after gathering the first fruits of the earth and the other after all were gathered about the first of November. The German churches are all familiar, and have been from the beginning, with the festival of the harvest home; and it is generally supposed that Germany is a little older than the first Pilgrim settlement of New England Thanksgiving day was a peculiar institution in England before there was any Massachusetts. And even in the latter colony it was not originated by the Puritans as so many of our newspaper writers err in saying. In the fall after the arrival at Plymouth rock, 1621, a notable thanksgiving was held, but fourteen years before that another colony landed upon an island near the Kennebec and held a thanksgiving service, and they were all church of England men, who erected a cross there and under its shadows listened to a sermon from their chaplain and gave God thanks for His goodness. Our American church, when it formed its prayer book, 1785, inserted the Thanksgiving service we this day hallow, with this heading, "A Form of Prayer and Thanksgiving to Almighty God for the Fruits of the Earth and all the Other Blessings of His Merciful Providence," and in so doing it simply followed the ancient and perpetual custom of the Christian church without the slightest reference to any New England custom.

Since God is good, the church and the nation or state following the custom of the church declares that men ought to be thankful and sets apart a day in which they may assemble and engage in thanksgiving But ought we not be thankful all the time? Certainly we ought It was a beautiful custom in some ancient monasteries, so to arrange the choirs of singers, that there might be no intermission in chanting the praises of God As soon as one little company had finished its hour of service another was ready to begin and thus the service never ended So if we will loved God as sincerely and devoutly as we ought the fragrant incense of gratitude would be ever ascending from our hearts But this is not so, the appointment of this day is a remin for that we have been and are receiving great favors at God's hands [illegible] seriously as we ought, from whence they come If we are thankful to day then the first great thing for which we want to express gratitude is that we have the right spirit We are thankful that we are thankful. If we are not then the first thing we shall pray for is, that God may give us a thankful spirit A gentleman in India, observing a devout Brahmin sitting under a cocoanut tree, asked for an interest in his prayers The anchorite answered that he would grant it [illegible] quest with pleasure, but that he ha[illegible] know what was the best for him to ask for "I have" said he, "seen you often and you appear to have good health and every thing else that can help to make you happy Perhaps the best thing that I can ask for you is that you may have a grateful heart That is what most of us need most, and that is what, if any of us have it, we ought to be most thankful for But "there are men and women who [illegible] of the few things they would like which God has denied them, and who never think at all of the innumerable things they need which God gives them day by day There are people whose whole life is one ungrateful grumble who seem to think that God has some spite against them and all this while they are incomparably more favored by Him than many others seem to be "—Lloyd. "It renders one melancholy and sad to be in their company. It is like entering Trophonius' cave [illegible] whichever went never laughed again God has made almost all animals, and birds with cheerful notes so

John Wesley, after contributing thousands of pounds to the cause of God during his lifetime, left [illegible] of only two hundred pounds, but his life on earth was one constant thanksgiving, and so is his life in paradise.

John Howard, the philanthropist, whose kindness was shown to the inmates of prisons all over the world, on settling his accounts at the end of certain year found a balance in his favor and proposed to his wife that they should take a pleasure trip to London Her answer was what a nice cottage for some person that money would build. The money was laid out accordingly, and so Howard's life was a perpetual Thanksgiving day, and over his grave in Dessau is inscribed this epitaph which a king might envy "He lived for others."

The difference between the life of one person and another at the final summing up is seen to be just this—the one approves his opportunities for doing good and making others happy while he pampers to his own well being, and the other lives only for himself and reaps the barren harvest of his selfishness

When that devoted band of Puritans came to this country and in their first Thanksgiving day the law of God which they had cherished and [illegible] forgotten all the people wept for sorrow at their past neglect, and then he encouraged them to be cheerful and to give cheer to others, in the words of the text, "Go your way eat the fat and drink the sweet and send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared" Here is the true way of living Thankful, not to be selfishly joyous, but to increase the joy of others who have not as we have And, alas, how many there are in this world who come under the description "those for whom nothing is prepared" But they exist not because God has failed to provide for them but because those to whom He has given in trust that which he intends for the good of [illegible] themselves instead of serving as stewards of His bounty

It is well for us at times to open the door of some shade of [illegible] looking in we may learn to appreciate our own many blessings No more than others we deserve, yet God has trusted us with more Let us to day and ever after use His gifts for the good of our suffering fellow men for by this only can we show that we are thankful And with one thought I will close It is not only for temporal comfort and [illegible] for [illegible] we should give but also for their spiritual help Our thankfulness must show itself in deeds that will enhance not only their bodily but also their spiritual welfare And while helping [illegible] we must not forget at the same time to help the souls I have [illegible] in many books a more faithful portrayal of both needs as in Dickens writings just such characters as you and I may find in almost any city Of these [illegible] bodily and soul that they know nothing of a heavenly Father who have given bread for all but others have kept it selfishly from them, and who has given comfort for their souls but those who knew it had never made it known to them, did you ever read the death scene in "Bleak House" where the poor, neglected, half starved street sweeper was visited by the kind Allan Woodcourt who tried to cheer up his last hour with the Lord's prayer—that prayer which teaches if it teaches anything that all men are brothers

Sol, did you ever know a prayer?

The Western Union Telegraph company will be open to day from 8 to 10 a. m. and from 4 to 6 p m.

The cheap rate excursions to the Missouri river will catch a great many people to day and to morrow.

Adam Dittemore made final proof of settlement in the county judge's office yesterday on his ranch near Granger.

The employes at the postoffice are under obligations to Mr. E. S. Cochn for Thanksgiving mince meat pies presented to each one of them.

The revival meetings at the Christian church will continue through the week and possibly longer. Dr. Collins will preach every evening at 7.30.

The president of the Women's Aid society desires to express her thanks to Butler Bros., 21 East Pike's avenue, for their generous donation of turkeys.

Mr. O. J. May, stenographer and type writer, of Burlington Junction, arrived in the city yesterday and has taken a position in the law office of J. E. McIntyre.

Mr. John B. Campbell, editor of the Daily Herald of St. Joseph, Mo., who is in the city looking up the resources of the country, paid the GAZETTE a call yesterday.

There were twenty-nine lots sold in Roswell City on Monday instead of nine as reported by the GAZETTE. Fifteen were sold yesterday in spite of the terrible weather.

There will be Thanksgiving service in Grace church this morning at 11 o'clock with a sermon by the rector. The offering will be given to the Woman's Aid society for the town poor.

Messrs. Robertson & Jebe, who have been in the business of wholesaling meat to the butchers of the city for the past two years, have disposed of their business to Callaway & Stark.

Mr. William Baker, advertising agent of the Rock Island road, accompanied the excursionists to the city yesterday and will help to explain the beauties of Colorado during the next fifteen days.

Miss Minnie Bean, who is a student at Wolf Hall, Denver, is at home during the Thanksgiving vacation. She is accompanied by Miss Birdie McDonald, also a student at Wolf hall, who will be her guest.

The members of the order of Knights of Pythias, with their ladies, enjoyed a pie social at Castle hall last night. A nice little supper was served and a general romp indulged in afterwards.

Joint circular No. 169 of the Colorado Railway Traffic association has been received, which announces that the rate on cast iron water pipe from Chicago to Colorado points will be 90c per 100 pounds hereafter.

The Rock Island will begin the sale of tickets for its cheap rate excursion to Missouri river points to day, and all those who expect to go and wish to avoid the crowd to morrow can leave on any of its regular trains to day.

Five car loads of steel rails arrived yesterday over the Rock Island for the Midland. It is to be used on the Crystal Lake cut off. This cut is eight miles in length and when completed will save through freight matter from being carried up over the mountain past Leadville.

The Phœnix literary society entertainment Friday evening gives promise of being one of the most pleasant of the year. Rev. Mr. Gregg will deliver an address and Mr. Greenough, one of the students who has traveled extensively in oriental countries, will tell something of the manners and life of the people of Turkey.

Union Thanksgiving services will be held in the First Baptist church to-day at 11 o'clock. Rev. Richard Montague, the pastor, will preside and addresses will be delivered by Rev. Jas. B. Gregg and Rev. M. S. Johnson. It has been the custom for the ministers of the city in years past to unite in their services both on Thanksgiving day and Christmas, and to alternate by having a sermon on one day and address on the other. This year the address comes on Thanksgiving and the sermon on Christmas.

The remains of Baggageman J. H. Flinn, who was killed in the Rio Grande accident at Husted on Monday, were buried in Evergreen cemetery yesterday afternoon. The funeral was held from the Grace Episcopal church, Rev. A. R. Kieffer reading the burial service. The Odd Fellows' society conducted the service at the grave according to the ritual of the order. There was a large attendance of friends and members of the order. The remains of W. H. Phipps, the express messenger, were forwarded to St. Joe, Mo., last night on the Rock Island road.

Unless the past spring and summer our southern brethren have thronged into Colorado and after climbing our peaks, exploring our canons and snowballing in July to their heart's content, returned delighted with our scenic attractions and charmed by the spirit of hearty hospitality with which they were welcomed. Now if cold be our duty, and any one, to return this winter. The Fort Worth Railroad has given us the following pamphlet entitled "Winter Tourist Routes and Rates from the north to the Southwest," giving round excursion rates for the winter season, and the choice of a number of different routes through the South. Of course we cannot justly plead like any of escaping from a severe winter, but many of them would be pleased with the change to a semi tropical climate, where the flowers never fade, and a visit to Mexico of such historic interest as Montezuma, Austin, Galveston, San Antonio, or New Orleans. Or if they should wish stranger and more romantic of these routes in search of a trip to such old west Arizona, or to old Mexico, Saltillo, and the City of Mexico. Full particulars may be obtained by addressing George Ady, General Passenger and Ticket Agent of the Denver, Texas and Fort Worth Railroad, or any General Ticket Agent in the State of Colorado. 1-24-tf

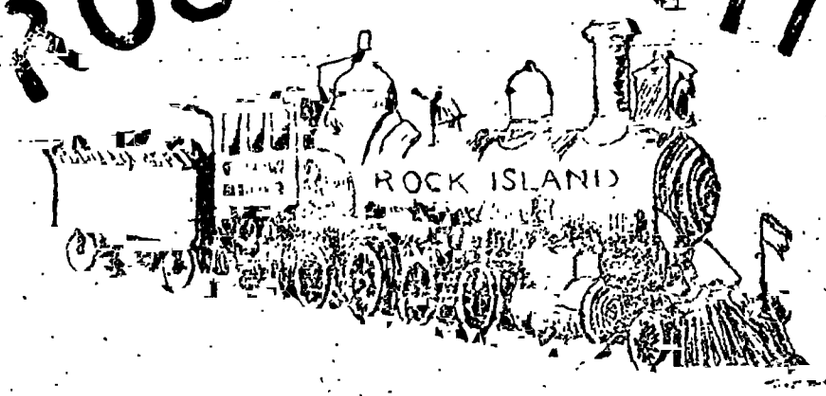
ROSWELL CITY.



GREAT SUCCESS!

The sale of lots now in progress in this new and thriving town is unsurpassed in the history of real estate sales in this vicinity. The people are beginning to realize that this property is just what they have been looking for all summer. Hundred of mechanics and tradesmen have bought lots there during the past week, on which to erect neat homes.

A SECOND COLORADO CITY

Is now an accomplished fact, except that there will be no saloons in Roswell City. The coming year will doubtless see hundreds of houses dotting the landscape which but a month ago was destitute of any sign of habitation. We want every man and woman in town that is looking for a home or investment to buy a lot of us. We are selling lots cheap, too cheap.

THINK OF THIS!

A House and Lot for $150.

Notwithstanding our enormous sales we have many beautiful residence lots left. Come and see us, whether you buy or not, we will gladly and proudly show you the coming city. If we had the space we could enumerate many new enterprises which have been arranged for during the past week.

Miss Anna Nichols is down from Denver to spend the Thanksgiving vacation. She is attending school at Wolfe hall.

Mr. John A. Kring, of the large wholesale grocery establishment in St. Louis, and an old friend of Mr. Clinton Collier, is registered at the Cliff house, from Omaha.

Yesterday morning was bright and pleasant, though clouds again gathered and some snow fell in the afternoon. The holiday was observed by a general suspension of business and services at the churches. In the evening an old fashioned Thanksgiving supper was given at the Ruxton house and was both pleasant and successful, while a largely attended and enjoyable social dance was indulged in at the Cliff house.

B. W. STEELE,
Manager of the GAZETTE.

The subject of an extra session of congress immediately after Harrison's inauguration is one which is receiving more or less attention. There are many republicans who think it a matter of vital importance to the party that the Fifty-first congress should convene early in March, while there are still others who strongly oppose an extra session because they think that the new administration should not be hampered by the presence of congress until its policy shall be developed. The calling of extra sessions in the past has seldom resulted in any benefit to the administration which called them. But the case at this time is one for which there is no precedent. Other extra sessions have been convened for the purposes of legislation, but the strongest argument in favor of convening one in March is made from a political standpoint by republicans, who claim that the party has fairly won control of the lower house by the election of a majority of members, feel that a great risk would be run in postponing organization until December. There will no doubt be many contested seats in the Fifty-first congress and the complexion of the committee on elections will always important, will be especially so this time. While republican leaders feel certain that an honest count will show for them a majority sufficient to elect the speaker who will appoint that committee and other equally important ones, there is no certainty that this will be the case in December. The contingency of death is to be considered. There have been occasions, two to five [illegible] in the [illegible] each of the six last [illegible] between the day of election and day upon which the members took their seats. It is not only possible but probable that [illegible] the more than three hundred men many of them of advanced age, who will compose the Fifty-first congress, there will be deaths. Should they fall in the republican ranks in close districts where the chances would be great that a democrat might be elected to succeed him, a single case of this kind might change the majority. It is said that the president-elect [illegible] session, but he would naturally be much more averse to any policy which might result in losing the administration the sympathy of the lower house.

Is it not probable that the Denver and Rio Grande track between this city and Colorado Springs is used by too many roads and that too many trains pass over it daily? Certainly the passenger and freight traffic of three such roads as the Denver and Rio Grande, the Missouri Pacific and the Rock Island must crowd a single track line greatly at times. The Atchison has also failed to put the use of its single track between Colorado Springs and Denver to the Highland and there is nothing to hinder it from doing the same with the other road if it please. Of course collisions often occur on roads which do not lease trackage to other lines, but it stands to reason that the greater the number of trains run on any track the larger the liability to such accidents must be. We hope that all the roads now running into this city on joint trackage arrangements will soon have their own tracks. They can all afford to build and they should be prompt to do it.
—[Denver Republican.

It is true that the more trains there are run on a single track the greater the liability, but this is met by the exercise of greater care and makes it absolutely necessary that none but the most skilled operatives shall be employed. The result in the end is that travel is rendered, if anything, safer than upon roads where the liability is less. While the Republican's statement may be true that all the roads now running on joint trackage can afford to lay their own tracks, it is certain that we cannot afford to have them do it. Already there are three road beds between Pueblo and Denver when one double track bed would be amply sufficient to meet the demands of the traffic of the six roads that use them. These three road beds probably represent an actual value of $12 per mile which must be added to the additional cost for their operation. On the proposition now invested in these three roads the public is now paying interest in freight rates and passenger fares. The already high interest the Republican proposes to nearly double. For if the three roads now running on joint tracks are to build their own road beds, it is not to be supposed that they will do it from philanthropic motives. Not only would they expect the public to pay the interest on the money they [illegible] for it would be the cost of keeping up six road beds. The rates already high would be higher. Let us encourage all the railroads we [illegible] we have now. We can't share lower rates so long as new roads not needed more than take the [illegible] of [illegible]

Two Humorists Pictured

Bill Nye and James Whitcomb Riley sat whiling away the time in parlor No. [illegible] Ebbitt's last evening. Mr. Nye was [illegible] on a sofa with a pillow on one end of it while Mr. Riley sat at a table and scribbled on various bits of paper. Mr. Nye wore a black skull cap to protect the [illegible] on bald head that has grown familiar to the public through the clever caricatures of Mr. M. Doucat, the art [illegible] of the New York World. A joke passed now and then. Mr. Nye spoke of something passing away like a snow in August, etc." interrupted Mr. Riley, "like a snowflake on the river." Bill thinks great men wear glasses and both have clean shaven faces. Mr. Riley having the advantage in hair on his head [illegible] which, however he is soon to shave. Mr. Nye is a taller man than Mr. Riley, but a stalwart man than Mr. Riley. So it might be a dispute as to whether he is [illegible] but [illegible] Mr. Nye is [illegible] unexpected contrast with Mr. Riley's [illegible] originality consists largely in [illegible] Mr. Nye is generally very quiet and serious, while Mr. Riley is constantly saying something funny. MR. CLEVELAND'S FUTURE

WASHINGTON, [illegible].—There has been [illegible] President Cleveland [illegible] is only 55, has been [illegible] and in the ordinary course of human events will have many years of [illegible] before him. After leaving the White House the president will probably [illegible] face to face with the necessity of adding to his income by professional labor. He is worth to-day [illegible] a large part of his property being unproductive. He owns Oak View and some other property in Lenox in Washington, and a small house [illegible] block and a [illegible] from all this [illegible] for the needs of his family.

According to the president's friends, he is settled [illegible] he will not return to Buffalo. The reasoning which, however, [illegible] opinion is that after a journey to Europe he will sell his Washington property and [illegible] place himself at the head of some [illegible] investment in New York city. [illegible] a trained and successful lawyer it is [illegible] profit to be will care to resume the practice of his profession. Certain it is that [illegible] within the last few days the president has hardly given a thought to the future, refusing even from a friend of his own political [illegible] tion as from a [illegible] of the current [illegible] topics and his characteristics [illegible] to be very flexible. For the present at least the [illegible] of this future [illegible] a more serious one than is apparent to the casual observer. Even supposing [illegible] he can be successfully settled as to [illegible] to [illegible] and [illegible] of living and [illegible] about his [illegible] might suffice for [illegible] years his family, there still remains the problem [illegible] land is not [illegible] enough to find [illegible] a retired life, and not enough [illegible] to find in his declining years the [illegible] of a settled [illegible].

In the after life of the [illegible] Mr. Cleveland cannot find much to comfort him. Washington lived only two years after his retirement [illegible] and the peace of even this brief period [illegible] from public duty was broken by the complications of a war with France and by labor at the plans of organization of the army, which were intrusted to him by President Adams. After twenty-five years of public [illegible] John Adams retired to private life, feeling deeply indebtedness for [illegible] which was in no [illegible] was [illegible] by a full consciousness of the fact that while he had saved the young republic from a war which [illegible] have ended in its ruin the country had chosen for his successor [illegible] the leader of the war party. [illegible] John Adams lived twenty-five years after leaving the White House. But he had the [illegible] advantages, which no few of our modern presidents on joy, of [illegible] and a farm and a good [illegible] for its [illegible] Adams left Washington for the [illegible] not waiting even for the [illegible] to [illegible] Quincy, and took up his [illegible] at Braintree, [illegible] There he read much, enjoyed [illegible] effort by the aid of [illegible] friends, and even [illegible] In a state constitutional convention when 82 [illegible] the [illegible] years became more and more [illegible] as the [illegible] moved [illegible] more slowly than [illegible].

Jefferson after his [illegible] was much [illegible] by financial difficulties, and the fifteen years which he spent at Monticello after leaving the White House [illegible] be described as years of [illegible] Madison was more fortunate [illegible] retiring at 65, he spent nineteen years with his books and his friends at Montpelier. Monroe was of [illegible] he left the city [illegible] and the cloud of [illegible] darkening years was the inadequacy of his income. He died [illegible] he was 73, but his wife died [illegible] after his return [illegible] from public life, and he spent the remainder of his days in the home of his daughter, Mrs. Gouverneur, in New York city.

Only two presidents have [illegible] public life after bidding goodby to the White House. One of these was John Quincy Adams, who entered in 1829, as I [illegible] years later appeared in the house of representatives where he remained the "Old Man Eloquent" till stricken down at his post seventeen years later. This reminds me of a [illegible] recently [illegible] by one of Mr. Cleveland's Buffalo friends.

"If the president failed of a re-election," said he, "I expect him to return to Buffalo in a couple of years and resume the practice of law. I also expect to see him once more mayor of Buffalo or a member of the legislature from our state. He may not be a second John Quincy Adams, but I know that Mr. Cleveland does not look upon [illegible] as an office which [illegible] to [illegible] after a few years [illegible] or performing further public [illegible] latter in which capacity, if called [illegible] by his fellow citizens."

Andrew Jackson lived eight years after leaving the White House, and [illegible] a rural neighborhood, perhaps because it is one everybody was interested. They must be a little foggy on the tariff, and also [illegible] at sea on [illegible] and social science, but on the [illegible] of the war [illegible] they [illegible] all [illegible] every man and woman of them is a philosopher.

And did Nathan Mary Bunk his heart go to the bad? Not at all. He simply drifted on in his indecisive way, took the [illegible] of the [illegible] people about him, married a well to do farmer's daughter, and [illegible] years after was [illegible] some importance in local politics, [illegible] his only son William [illegible] deputy of the county treasurer [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
